 A CELEBRATION OF FINE DESIGN

150 Years of Great Design

Frederick Parker, the founder of Parker & Sons was born in Shoreditch in 1845. As his father's business grew, the family moved to Bracklyn Street in Islington where Frederick's love of furniture began.

In 1869 Frederick Parker started the business that was to become Parer Knoll. Over the years he built a solid reputation for the development of beautifully handcrafted furniture launching styles and designs that redefined seating in form and function over the course of the 19th century. This led to furnishing the homes of Victorian gentry as well as country homes and public buildings across London. Throughout this time his tale of craft travelled through the eastern and northern streets of London during a period of design revival.

As the brand continued to grow the business moved to High Wycombe where the first new generation recliner and the famous Statesman chair were manufactured.

Collection 150 from Parker Knoll

Drawing on our recently restored Frederick Parker archive, Collection 150 has been designed to celebrate our years of rich heritage as well as our founder's commitment to develop sofas and chairs that are a product of skilled design, high quality, elegant proportions and supreme comfort.

The collection takes specific influence from the 1920s and 30s, a defining period for Parker Knoll, as post war Britain formed. During this time the brand was commissioned by Cunard to furnish all the rooms of the ocean-going liners from the sofas and chairs, to beds and occasional furniture.

Our latest collection is a celebration of this style defining period, combining the Art Deco influences from the 1920s with a contemporary aesthetic to create a collection of finely designed sofas and chairs that offer refined style and an abundance of comfort.

Comprised of two sofa collections, Hoxton and Wycombe, alongside their complementary chairs, Shoreditch and Fitzroy, the range is a celebration of beautiful shape and intricate detail.

To really bring the collection to life, we have once again developed a brand new fabric collection. Working with specialist mills, we have commissioned and created a refined colour palette including contemporary plain weaves combined with cotton velvets and rich textured structures. These fabrics are beautifully accented by designs that have been influenced by artists, fashion, society and architectural elements from the Art Deco period.
